If you are considering a job change, first take The CALL so you make the right change.

Happy New Year from iMoneyCoach! We hope you have enjoyed the holidays and are ready to jump into 2011.

Starting a new year for many means thinking about a new occupation. And with the current job market, it is a good idea to know what type of job would best suit you. Even if you haven't been thinking about a new career, you might find this information useful.

O\*Net is a website created for the U.S. Department of Labor that shares all sorts of information about occupations, including salaries, projected job openings, required skills, education requirements, etc. You can search by a specific occupation, or you can search by a specific talent or skill that you have to see what occupations would be a good match.

Besides looking for a career change, O\*Net is a great tool to share with high school and college students thinking about starting a career. Not only is data shown by the national standards and averages, but you can drill down for specific details by state as well.
