Know What is in Your Home

If something were to happen to your home, do you have an inventory of what you own? Do you know what you own and how much it is worth, and does your insurance policy reflect this? If fire or burglar struck, would you be able to get the right amount from your insurance company to replace damaged or stolen items?

iMoneyCoach has come across a couple ways that make a home inventory easier. Getting a list together can help you decide how much insurance to hold or it can help you through the claims process if something happens.

1. Know Your Stuff online inventory – The Insurance Information Institute offers a FREE way to inventory your home and keep the information online so it is accessible to you from anywhere. This site provides a video and information on the benefits of creating a home inventory and makes it a simple process.

2. The West Virginia Insurance Commission provides a PDF here that you can print and fill out with your home inventory. It is a comprehensive list that goes room by room, making the process easier.

It is a good idea to store the inventory someplace besides your home so it is protected (i.e. with a trusted family member or friend or in a safe-deposit box). Also, be sure to update your list as you make new purchases, and remember to save receipts for those bigger items.

While we don't want you to live in fear of disaster by any means, we would like to recommend that you start a home inventory right away. It can save you time and money in the long run.
